IT Job You Want and why :

I want a be backend developer or backend Engineer.

Because backend development is a critical aspect of web development, which involves creating the server-side of a website or application. This includes designing and building the database, server-side application logic, and APIs that power the frontend of a website or application. Backend developers work with programming languages such as Python, Ruby, Java, PHP, and more to create the logic and functionality of a website or application.
